26th MHAPSOPHACON 2025 Detection and Management of Leprosy: A Case Report

Presented by: Dr. Anil Bhatia, Dr. Parvati Kulkarni, Dr. Prashant Kulkarni (Host)
From: Department of Dermatology, Venereology and Leprology, P.D. Chitambar Medical College and Hospital, Jalgaon

Introduction: Leprosy is a chronic infectious disease caused by Mycobacterium leprae. It is a multisystemic disease affecting the skin, peripheral nerves, and mucous membranes. The disease is characterized by slow progression and long duration. The diagnosis is based on clinical features, histopathology, and microbiology. The management involves multidrug therapy (MDT) for a minimum of 12 months. The aim of this report is to highlight the clinical presentation, diagnosis, and management of a case of leprosy.

Case Presentation: The subject presented to the Department of Dermatology, Venereology and Leprology, P.D. Chitambar Medical College and Hospital, Jalgaon, where we have retrospectively analyzed the clinical, histopathological, and microbiological profile of a case of leprosy. A 45-year-old male patient from Jalgaon presented with progressive skin lesions, numbness, and tingling in the hands and feet for 5 years. Clinical examination revealed multiple well-defined, erythematous, and hypopigmented patches on the face, neck, and hands. The patient had a history of diabetes mellitus.

Diagnosis: The diagnosis was confirmed through histopathology and microbiology. The histopathology showed a dense infiltrate of lymphocytes and macrophages in the dermis, with a characteristic "candle flame" appearance. The microbiology showed the presence of acid-fast bacilli (AFB) in the smears.

Management: The patient was treated with multidrug therapy (MDT) for 12 months. The treatment included Rifampin, Clofazimine, and Isoniazid. The patient showed a significant improvement in the skin lesions and numbness after 6 months of treatment. The patient is currently under follow-up.

Conclusion: Leprosy is a chronic infectious disease that can be diagnosed and managed effectively. Early diagnosis and treatment are essential for a good outcome. The use of MDT is the standard of care for leprosy.

Rising Incidence of Infectious Erythema in Children in Karnataka, India

Introduction

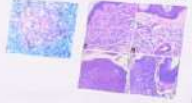

Infectious erythema (IE) is a self-limiting disease caused by parvovirus B19. It is characterized by a prodromal phase with a febrile illness, followed by a rash. The rash is typically erythematous and maculopapular, and is often accompanied by arthralgia and arthritic symptoms. The clinical presentation of IE is highly variable, and the disease is often underdiagnosed.

Materials and Methods

Study population
A total of 100 cases of IE were identified from the records of the Department of Dermatology, Government Medical College, Mysore, Karnataka, India, between 2017 and 2022. The patients were selected based on the clinical presentation of the disease, and were confirmed by serological tests.

Discussion

IE is a common childhood disease in many parts of the world, and has become a significant public health problem. The rising incidence of IE in Karnataka, India, is a cause for concern, and highlights the need for further research into the epidemiology and pathogenesis of the disease. The clinical presentation of IE is highly variable, and the disease is often underdiagnosed.

Date: 16th, 17th & 18th Jan., 2025 Venue: Dr. Ketki Patil Hall

India's Health Transition: Demographic, Epidemiological and Economic

India's Health Transition - Demographic, Epidemiological and Economic

Demographic Transition

- Total Fertility Rate (TFR) from 5.2 in the 1970s to 2.1 in 2021 (see www.unicef.org/india)
- Increase in life expectancy from 50 years in the 1950s to 76 years in 2021 (see www.ilo.org/india)
- Increase in the proportion of the elderly due to increased life expectancy
- Currently 20% of the total Indian population, projected to reach 25.5% by 2050 (see www.ilo.org/india)

Epidemiological Transition

- Shift from communicable diseases (e.g., malaria, TB) being the leading causes of mortality in the 1950s to a rise in non-communicable diseases (NCDs) like diabetes, heart disease, and cancer by the 2000s.
- The Global Burden of Disease study (GBD) 2019 indicates that NCDs are now the leading cause of death in India, accounting for over 60% of all deaths.

Economic Transition

- India's per capita net National Income (NNI) at current prices has shown significant growth from ₹1,644 in 2000-01 to ₹1,04,206 in 2023-24 (see www.ilo.org/india)
- Significant reduction in Out-of-Pocket Expenditure (OOPE) as a percentage of Total Health Expenditure (THE) from 44.2% of THE in 2013-14 to 35.45% of 2023-24 (see www.ilo.org/india)
